

National Further Education & Training Certificate in Banking (NQF 4)

What is covered in the National FETC Certificate in Banking (NQF 4)?

The unique elective offering of this qualification has been approved by the Financial Services Board to fulfil the minimum FAIS Fit & Proper generic requirements for Categories I and IV. The qualification covers the banking regulatory and legal environment, marketing and sales techniques, customer service and key banking products and services.

Who is the National FETC Certificate in Banking (NQF 4) aimed at?

This qualification is aimed at people already working in the banking sector. It is designed specifically for those employees who are either already in a FAIS role or who want to enter a FAIS role in the near future.

What is the accreditation status of the Further Education & Training Certificate: Banking (NQF 4)?

The FETC in Banking (NQF 4) qualification is accredited and certificated by BANKSETA. It is registered with the South African Qualifications Authority (SAQA) as a 120 credit qualification at NQF 4 (SAQA ID 20185 – see www.saga.org.za). Chartall Business College is accredited by the BANKSETA to train and assess the qualification.

How is the National FETC Certificate in Banking (NQF 4) delivered?

Online learning delivery:

Students who enrol for online learning will have full access to all training material via the online learner management system. For more information about online learning please click here. This option is ideal for candidates who are self-motivated but have not worked for 3 or more years in a FAIS specific role and also those who have not completed the RE1 and 5 examinations.

RPL is also available, but only for students who qualify for this option. For more information about RPL, please click here. A pre-screening process will be conducted to determine which deliver method is most suited to the specific student.

Can I earn any exemptions?

Chartall Business College is able to award students with certain exemptions to recognise the internal training they have completed with their employers in the banking sector. You will be asked to submit your internal training records so that Chartall Business College can work out if you qualify for any exemptions. Students who have a Senior Certificate (matric/grade 12) will also qualify for exemptions for two languages and business calculations (if they have maths at matric level).

How is this qualification assessed?

Students are assessed using a Portfolio of Evidence (PoE). Chartall Business College has set questions and assignments that are completed over the duration of the qualification in your own time. This portfolio will be assessed by a registered assessor and feedback will be provided. Students will not have to write any exams to earn the qualification. The advantage of the portfolio as a mode of assessment is that it can be used after the learning to support the student's CV as it showcases what they can do practically (you will need to keep a copy of it for this purpose). Students will still have to write the RE1 and RE4 exams which are set by the Financial Services Board (FSB).
